

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A heat pipe structure includes a tubular member, and a wick structure having a base portion formed at one end of the tubular member and a surrounding portion extending from the base portion for attaching to an interior
5 wall of the tubular member. Therefore, an end portion of a heat pipe can be used to contact a heat source for dissipation to provide more efficient dissipation and prevent from limitation of use.